

Cosmetic Bonding

Cosmetic bonding, often called resin bonding, is when a tooth colored resin is bonded to your teeth, then sculpted into proper shape. The resin is a composite of liquid acrylic and tiny particles of glass. The composite resin forms a durable, stain resistant surface that can be polished to mimic the texture of your natural teeth.

Bonding offers a new treatment option for dental problems. Best of all, it is conservative, inexpensive, and easily attained. If you don't like your teeth, cosmetic bonding may be for you.

Use For Bonding

In addition to the above examples, bonding can also restore cavities in front and back teeth, replace old or unattractive “silver fillings” and repair root abrasions to help prevent cavities and root sensitivity.

*Image source: Bonding – Royal Cross